Teachers' Pension Bill.

The Teachers' Pension Bill has been introduced in the Lower House at Frankfort. This bill provides for a pension fund from which pensions are to be issued to the teachers retiring after thirty years of active service, and also contains a sick benefit provision. To raise the pension fund a tax of $10 or $20 a year will be levied on the teachers, according to their salary, and also one half of 1 per cent on all taxable city property. The fund, after the first year, would be approximately $3,000, and the bill provides for the investment of this money in some paying proposition. According to the provisions of the bill a teacher retiring after thirty years of active service shall receive $600 a year and for any teacher retiring after twenty-five years active service a pension of $500 per year is allowed.

Whose Is It?

Charles Morgan, the negro who was recently killed in the railroad wreck at Atlanta, Ga., is said to have had his life insured for $1,000, payable to his wife, and that she had her life insured for half that amount, payable to her husband. If both were instantly killed, will the money go to his people or to her people? If he died first, the money belonged to her at the time of his death, and if she died first, the money belonged to him or to his estate. In a case in which a man and his wife had made wills in each other's favor and both were drowned by the sinking of a boat, no other person being present, the Court decided that as the man was the stronger, he probably lived longer than the wife and the property went to his people. In a railroad accident, strength would cut no figure and this precedent would not serve.

Fallen Asleep.

In tender memory of little Mayme, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stone W. Maupin, who died January 15, 1912. Little Mayme is dead. The brief span is severed, the little sunbeam, dropped as a priceless jewel into loving arms of adoring young parents, has fulfilled its mission, and gone back to the God who gave, as sweet, pure and fleeting as the mista frolicking snow flakes that mantled the earth just as the spirit of our babe winged back its flight to eternal glory to Heaven and to rest. Blessed be our resurrected babe, the little mound in the city of our dead and the finger of promise pointing to the way of peace. Rest to her soul; sweet sleep to the mouldering clay. Fallen asleep dear babe— Called back to our God to rest. Your white hands crossed on your breast as soft— As down on a dove's sweet breath. Tenderly, unaware. Sleep came in the waning night And kissed her there on the twilight That leads to the morning light. Only a little dust— So small that a rose might hide it. And we trust in God—or try to trust— When we kneel in grief beside it. We kneel at her grave and say, We only dream that we weep; She would not leave us and go away— She has only fallen asleep. And that she will awake we know, And smile at a grief like this! It could not be she will leave us so. With never a good-night kiss. So we kneel by her grave and say, We only dream that we weep; She would not leave us and go away— She has only fallen asleep. AUNT IDA, Richmond, Ky., January 23, 1912.

A Righteous Decision.

The Winchester Democrat says: "Judge Evans this week rendered a decision that will make him solid with the women: a lady, the wife of a tenant farmer, sold turkeys, chickens, eggs, butter, etc., saved the money and bought a horse. Without her knowledge or consent, her husband traded the animal off. The trade did not suit her, and she brought suit for the possession of her horse. While admitting the source from which she purchased the horse, the opposing lawyer claimed that all these things which she had sold really belonged to her husband. Judge Evans would not see it in that light and ordered the horse returned to her."
